

To preserve Euclid Avenue

Upland general plan amendment approved

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Upland City Council Monday night passed a general plan amendment and zone change aimed at preserving the character of Euclid Avenue, but held off action on setting building standards for a scenic corridor.

Council members waded through two-thirds of the Euclid Avenue study, but with the hour growing late decided to consider the text amendment to the city code — the part of the study drawing the most debate — until July 2.

Planning Director Bill Young described the "three-pronged approach" as having the "intent to protect, preserve and enhance the aesthetic, cultural and scenic amenities and historical amenities of Euclid Avenue."

While the proposed scenic corridor zone extends the length of Euclid in Upland, the general plan amendment and zone change each address 10 areas from southern city limits to just north of Foothill Boulevard.

Young noted only 67 of the 367 properties examined in the Euclid study have absentee owners.

Although the council approved staff's recommendations for each of the areas considered, first and second readings on the general plan amendment and zone change could be delayed to run concurrently with adoption of the text amendment to the code.

Young said, "The approach that we took as far as the general plan amendment and zone change are concerned are to protect the integrity of the single-family residences in block faces that were essentially cohesive in nature."

These are homes of "sound, quality housing that looks like it can stand for a substantial period of time, well maintained, has either cultural or historic or aesthetic values," he added.

Although single-family homes are the dominant land use along Euclid, the general plan and zoning for several of the areas considered Monday night permit more intense development. Similarly, other changes down-zone properties' future use from light industry to commercial.

Existing uses out of line with the changes are allowed to continue, but expansion upon non-conforming land uses is restricted.

Eugene Bello, president of the Upland Chamber of Commerce and owner of a realty firm, expressed concern on two areas covered by the general plan amendment.

Referring to two lots included in a general plan change from highway commercial to low-density residential use at the northeast corner of Euclid and Foothill Boulevard, Bello said the new designation could pose a "hardship in the future."

"We feel the corner requires a commercial-professional use," he said.

Bello noted that under state law Upland is permitted only three general plan amendments a year, limiting prospects for future commercial development at the corner if a proposal comes along.

Most of the changes were approved with little comment.

Young noted state and federal grants are available to protect homes along a scenic corridor or having historic value. The grants cover such measures as double glazing windows and insulating walls "to assist in preserving the living environment for people who wish to stay," he said.

He said the general plan amendment looks ahead perhaps five to 15 years and that commercial development of currently residential land could occur in the future in block sections rather than spot conversions.

Census takers sought

The city of Upland is accepting applications for 72 persons to act as census takers next month during the city's special census.

Work begins July 1 and the job runs at least five to 10 days, possibly longer. Applicants will work eight hours a day, including Saturdays and some evenings.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old and citizens of the United States, and a high school education or its equivalent is preferred for the applicants.

The first test for applicants will be held June 21, and applications should be submitted before June 28, the proposed date for final testing.

Forms may be picked up at the personnel office of city hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave. For further information, call the personnel office, 982-2185.

Upland gives $7,250 in aid

The Upland City Council wound up its hearings on next year's budget Tuesday night by allocating $7,250 to eight community organizations and more than $46,000 for city's first permanent sidewalk repairs in over a year.

After listening to objections from residents, the council also agreed to call further public hearings on the $1 million traffic-improvement project for Euclid Avenue.

With Mayor George Gibson absent, the council passed a resolution authorizing all ordinary city expenditures into July, the start of fiscal 1979-80, until the budget is adopted. Final approval of the budget is scheduled for July 16.

Representatives of several community organizations told the council their groups are still smarting from contributions cut back or eliminated by local governments as a fallout of Proposition 13.

Wayne Fanning, founder of the Wayne Fanning Alcohol Education Program, said his organization is approaching the new fiscal year with a "feeling of despair."

The Ontario-based program anticipates cutting its staff from 10 full-time employees to six full-time and two part-time workers. The group's request explanation to the council blames inflation and an expected 71 percent increase in rent this November for the financial straits.

Fanning said the organization will receive no money in 1979-80 from the city of Ontario.

In all, funding requests from the organizations totaled $58,974. With Councilman Bill Bottin dissenting, the council followed recommendations by city staff in allocating the $7,250.

Bottin said, "Giving one's own money for contributions and donations is very, very difficult. But giving someone else's money, i.e. the taxpayers', is even more difficult."

The community organizations provide needed services, but Upland has higher priorities for its funds, Bottin said.

Bottin suggested postponing funding now and reconsidering the requests once Upland's financial picture takes shape in the coming fiscal year.

A year ago, the council rejected all contributions to community groups. It allocated $10,450 to nine groups this April on learning the city was in better financial condition than expected in the first Proposition 13 year.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas said the message of Proposition 13 was cut the "fat" of government, not social services.

Mayor Pro Tem John McCarthy said the delay in funding might hurt the groups' operations.

"I realize other communities have cut them off totally ... 'I'm just' fearful that if we in turn don't fund them, say for the first six months, what effect it might have on some of these programs — that it could possibly end them," he said.

The groups and amounts allocated were: Chaffey Communities Cultural Center, $1,200; Suicide and Crisis Intervention Service, $1,000; Town Affiliation Association, $550; Valley Oratorio Society, $500; Wayne Fanning Alcohol Education Program, $1,250; West End Opera Association, $1,250; West End Symphony Association, $1,250, and We Turn In Pushers (WeTIP), $250.

$16.75 million spending plan

Upland council reviews budget

In contrast to a year ago when Proposition 13 was on the minds of most taxpayers, a handful of residents Thursday night heard the city council review the $16.75 million proposed budget for the coming fiscal year.

The council reviewed, but took no action, on a spending plan for 1979-80 that would continue most programs along current levels and add some changes and new wrinkles.

Finance Director Anthony Andrade noted property tax continues to play a dwindling role in the city's overall financial picture under Proposition 13.

Property tax makes up 8.1 percent, or $1,358,000, of the city's $16,407,948 in estimated revenues next year. In the budget adopted for 1977-78, the last fiscal year before Proposition 13, property tax amounted to 28 percent of total revenue.

Andrade said sales and use taxes are closing some of that gap because sales tax revenue has grown an average of 18.5 percent for the past three years and a 14.5 percent climb is forecast. Combined sales and use taxes are forecast at just over $3 million, or 18.4 percent of Upland's revenue.

Andrade also pointed out revenue from "other agencies" is playing an expanded role in the budget, totaling $3,846,060, or 23 percent of total revenue.

"What it means is that we're more and more reliant on the state, the federal government and other governmental entities for financing for the budget."

"And any of the laws they pass or policies that they dictate has a greater impact on the city of Upland," he said.

The proposed budget includes $660,000 from the state's allocation of surplus funds, although Andrade noted a bill recently passed by the Assembly provides for a 7 percent growth of that figure, which was the amount Upland received this year.

The budget proposes 266.11 city positions for 1979-80, up about 21 positions from the 245.15 adopted for this year (fractions represent part-time employees and city workers on staff for less than the full year).

Andrade noted phasing out of three programs under the U.S. Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) is a major factor for the increase. CETA employees are paid through federal funds.

City administrators outlined several changes proposed for the new year.

City Engineer Blanchard reviewed a reorganization of the engineering department that includes moving a CETA clerk-typist to the city payroll, adding an electronic computer technician to take fuller advantage of Upland's mini computer and revising job titles and duties.

Blanchard would become engineering director and Assistant City Engineer John Wisz the city engineer under the proposal.

Blanchard called the current year, which saw a reduction in engineering staff, "extremely unsatisfactory" because of cuts and employees leaving for other jobs.

As for the change in job titles, he said, "The problem is that I'm strung out too far." He said the new post would free him from many of the routine calls now directed at the city engineer allowing him to concentrate more on regional projects and administrative coordination.

Librarian Linda Yao proposed the city begin converting the library's card catalog to a microfilm computerized system next year. She said the system has an initial cost of $15,890 and that the system would pay for itself in six years. The system so far is not in the budget.

Planning Director Bill Young noted his department's budget includes about $20,000 for computerized base mapping of the city as a planning aid. Aerial base mapping would run about $50,000, Young said, and the city failed to find partners for the project when aerial mapping was previously proposed.

Upland City Council rejects street improvement bid

Despite a warning that the price of asphalt is likely to go up, the Upland City Council rejected the only bid Monday night for $400,000 worth of street improvements throughout the city.

City Engineer Fred Blanchard described contractors as both busy and selective in what they will currently consider for project bidding.

Matich Corp. was the sole bidder for the project that included resurfacing of Mountain Avenue between Eighth Street and Foothill Boulevard, Euclid Avenue between 19th and 24th streets, Seventh Street between Mountain and San Antonio avenues and other work.

Its bid totaled $400,206.40.

Blanchard conceded that awarding a project on the basis of one bid is somewhat unusual and said the total submitted by Matich was "surprising" because it exceeded consultants' estimates by some $100,000.

However, he said that while Upland may get more competition by putting the project out for bid later, the increasing price of asphalt would cut into any chance for savings.

He noted some experts are saying the price of gasoline may hit a $1.50 per gallon by the end of the year. With petroleum a key ingredient of asphalt, Blanchard said he foresees asphalt's cost going up along with gas.

Blanchard also said the city would use state gas tax funds for the project. He said the state has indicated concern over the current amount of Upland's reserves for this "Article 8" money and the project would reduce the balance.

However, the council decided to take its chances later. With Councilwoman Ina Petokas dissenting and Mayor George Gibson absent, the council rejected the project on a 3-1 vote.

Life-saving equipment funds

The New Uplanders led fund-raising efforts that have provided more than $1,500 toward purchase of "jaws of life" rescue equipment for the Upland Fire Department.

The organization capped its drive Wednesday with the presentation of a check for $1,220 to Battalion Chief Don Johnson, representing the fire department, during a club luncheon.

Majorie Bryant, who chaired the group's philanthropy project, noted the New Uplanders held a fashion show in May and sponsored a booth during February's Madonna of the Trail golden anniversary celebration to raise money.

In all, the organization's efforts were spread out over six months, she said.

Prizes at the fashion show were donated by local merchants.

The Episcopal Church Women of St. Mark's Church in Upland added $100, as did a couple in memory of Leon Lamphear, Upland's fire chief who died in 1977.

The firemen's association contributed $109.

Johnson said the city has gone to bid on the rescue tool as part of the equipment for a ladder truck recently authorized by the city council.

He added that delivery of the $8,000 jaws could take place within two months.

Speaking to the New Uplanders, Johnson said of the equipment, "It's not a desirable thing — it's a mandatory thing at this time for the department."

The hydraulically powered tool will be used to spread and shear metal, such as when freeing victims trapped in cars following accidents.

Johnson explained that the fire department currently relies on Ontario and the Foothill Fire Protection District when the jaws of life is needed. Delays of 15 or 20 minutes under the arrangement now threaten successful rescues, he added.

Along with saving lives, Upland's purchase of the equipment will eliminate tying up men and equipment from Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga, he indicated.

The city will buy a Lucas type jaws of life, which Johnson said has several advantages over another model Upland had been looking at.

were capped with the presentation last week of a check for $1,220 toward purchase of "jaws of life" rescue equipment for the fire department. (Staff photo)

The clinic is open only to dogs of Upland residents. No out-of-city dogs will be vaccinated.

Earle Anderson appointed as member of CCWD board

Earle Anderson

Earle Anderson, a member of the Alta Loma School District board of trustees, has been appointed interim director of the Cucamonga County Water District.

Anderson, 44, will complete the unexpired term of former director Galer Royer who died in late March. A new director will be chosen during the November election.

The new director, a mechanical engineer, has served on the school board for six years and has spent one year on the Municipal Advisory Council prior to Rancho Cucamonga's incorporation. He also has served on several community boards.

He has been an employee of Kaiser Steel for 23 years and is currently division superintendent of sheet and tin at Kaiser. He holds a lifetime teaching credential and a degree in business management.

Anderson is also a member of several trade organizations.

Children may audition for 'Abracadabra,' class

"Abracadabra" means magic for children ages 8 through 12 who want to participate in summer time theater at the University of La Verne, June 25-July 28.

Children are invited to audition for "Abracadabra," theater classes and performances by and for children, to be held at ULV's Gazebo Stage.

Students will begin the five-week course with exercises in mime, music and dance. Children will choose characters from legends and fairy tales and bring them to life through developing gestures, voices, masks and costumes for them. Materials written by the children will be performed, as well as original work done at ULV's Padua Hills Writers Workshop, to be held July 2-28.

The class will end with a final performance by the children, who will oversee everything from box office sales to publicity.

Course instructors will be Jim Bauerline of the Nevada County Children's Theater and Roxanne DeForrest Rogers of the Marina Theater in San Francisco.

Admission for the courses will be determined by auditions. Fee for the class is $75.

Auditions will be held Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m., by appointment. For more information, call Dr. John Woodruff, director of theater, ULV, at 593-3511.

Central school trustees ok classified workers' contract

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The Central school board Tuesday night concluded negotiations with employees that began more than a year ago by ratifying a three-year contract with the district's some 110 classified employees.

The agreement includes a 6 percent retroactive pay increase covering the current school year, specific salary adjustments for particular job titles in 1979-80 and a maximum 7 percent increase in 1980-81 subject to growth in state funding and a reopener clause.

Trustees also approved a tentative budget totaling $3,973,591 for the coming fiscal year. Revisions since the preliminary budget was approved in May included cuts of more than $127,000 of materials requested at four schools and maintenance and other equipment.

Chapter 605 of the California School Employees Association (CSEA) voted its approval for the contract last week.

Talks began more than a year ago but were hindered for months until the state Supreme Court overturned a provision of SB 154 that in effect froze the salaries of most public employees.

John Tate, negotiator for the district, said provisions of the contract changed little since the district's last offer.

He said that under the contract the district still has the option of contracting for bus service with a private firm under a district's rights clause, although classified employees might still challenge such an arrangement.

The district has been looking into contracted bus service as one way to cut costs.

After this year's 6 percent retroactive pay hike, increases next year vary and hinge on individual positions in the salary schedule.

In 1980-81, pay increases for classified employees follow the same provisions the district reached earlier in its agreement with teachers.

Large electric bills due after heat wave

By STEVE STANDERFER
Staff Writer

Large electric bills may reflect increased demand for power used by West End residents to escape the recent heat wave, according to officials of Southern California Edison Co.

The heat wave that brought 100-degree temperatures earlier this week could bring $300 electric bills to large residential customers who fail to practice energy conservation.

While Edison Co. officials are hesitant to say what "average" customers might expect to pay for electricity during the summer months, they agree residents with large homes and high electrical usage could see a $300 bill.

Officials stressed, however, that the average bill would not be that high.

Still, rate hikes approved last winter and increased usage spawned by unseasonably hot weather may mean West End electricity customers will be paying more money when their next two-month billing statement arrives, officials say.

Edison experienced their largest demand for electricity this week, breaking records on Monday and Tuesday as Southern Californians baked in a spring heat wave. Electricity usage peaked at 12,224 megawatts at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Southern California Edison's reserve capacity was cut to about 4 percent because of the high usage. Because the company likes to have a 20 percent reserve, any malfunction or excessive demand could have forced the utility to use rolling blackouts, according to district manager Dick Verrue.

The blackouts, Verrue explained, would have been put into effect mainly in residential areas for about an hour at a time to "preserve the system."

Edison, in light of the large demand it experienced this week, is stressing energy conservation and "load management" both to lower electric bills and to prevent possible blackouts.

Rick Thomason, a consumer services consultant for Edison, explains that "load management" means using electrical appliances throughout different times of the day while conservation means "not wasting energy."

During summer, peak power usage in Southern California is between noon and 8 p.m. Most electricity is used about 3 p.m.

Thomason advises customers to turn off appliances in the afternoon, using them only in the morning or evening hours. Air conditioning costs, he says, can be cut by about 30 percent if the thermostat is raised from 70 to 78 degrees.

Customers with central air conditioning should turn thermostats up to 85 degrees while out of the house, Thomason says. Therefore, the house will still be cooler than it is outside and will not require as much energy to bring the room temperature down, he explains.

Other energy-saving tips, according to Thomason, include:

— Clean air-conditioning filters and shield outdoor air-conditioning equipment from sunlight.

— Insulate and weather-seal homes. Attic insulation can reduce energy costs by as much as 34 percent.

— Keep light bulbs and fixtures clean. Dust can lower lighting levels.

— Investigate switching from incandescent bulbs to fluorescent lamps in some areas.

The American Express® Gold Card. The best gets better.

We're offering the American Express Gold Card with the repayment choices you'd give yourself if you were in charge.

We can't really improve on the worldwide travel and entertainment privileges of the American Express Gold Card. But when it comes to saving money, well, that's our middle name.

Until today, the American Express Gold Card was only available in California through commercial banks. And there were only two ways to pay. One: Pay the whole bill which saves interest payments. Two: Pay in installments with the traditional bank interest charge of up to 18% a year.

An exclusive, honest-to-goodness benefit to savers.

Today we're offering the American Express Gold Card. And now, there's a new way to pay.

Of course, there's still no way to beat the economics of paying everything when the bill arrives. But we have a new, smarter option for those of you who occasionally wish to extend payments. (Maybe for those extraordinary charges you ran up on an extraordinary vacation.)

You can pre-arrange a line-of-credit with us backed by your savings account. If you use it, it allows you maximum flexibility at rates considerably lower than commercial banks. You set the installment payments you like. Or, if you prefer, make interest payments only.

We call it the 1% advantage.

What it means is that you will be charged only 1% more than what you are earning on your savings account. For example, if you have a passbook savings account earning 5 1/4% you would pay only 6 1/4%. Your savings stay safe. They are not withdrawn. They continue to earn interest. There's no interest charge at all, of course, until you decide to use your line-of-credit.

Here's our plan.

Open and maintain a savings account with us with a minimum balance of $2500. Then we can help arrange for you to have one of the most widely used and accepted credit cards around: The American Express Gold Card. Once you are a Gold Card member you will receive, with American Express statements that exceed $100, a line-of-credit activator. This is a form that puts you in charge. You don't have to use it. But, if you choose to activate your savings-backed line of credit you simply sign and return the activator.

The American Express Gold Card. Unusual card. Unusual privileges.

- Right away you get at least a $2000 line of credit.
- Over nine thousand participating Gold Card locations can give you emergency cash up to $1000 with or without a check.
- Instant travel funds available all over the world.
- Personal check cashing privileges at select hotels around the world and at participating domestic airlines counters.
- American Express Travelers cheques around the clock in selected major airports and convenient travel-related locations around the country. (Additional one-time enrollment needed.)
- Prepaid automatic travel insurance.

Truth-in-Lending Disclosure Statement

Your line of credit, when activated, becomes a pre-authorized loan. It is backed by a pledged savings account. The following Truth-in-Lending disclosure, therefore, is required. The balance of your loan account on which the FINANCE CHARGE is imposed daily is the balance of all loans outstanding on the previous day. All payments, when received, are credited first to the unpaid FINANCE CHARGE accumulated through the date of receipt, and any balance of the payment in excess of the accumulated FINANCE CHARGE is credited to the outstanding loan balance. After all payments received on the same date are so credited, all new loans represented by fund transfers from the association's bank account on that date will be debited to the outstanding loan account.

The amount of the FINANCE CHARGE, each day, is determined by multiplying the periodic daily rate times the outstanding loan balance on the previous day, and the amount thus determined is added to the unpaid balance of accumulated FINANCE CHARGES.

The periodic rate is used to determine the amount of the FINANCE CHARGE imposed each day is 1/365 of the applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE. The applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE is 1% plus the interest rate of the savings account pledged to obtain the Gold Card loan privileges.

Annual interest rates on savings accounts currently range from 5.25% to 8%. Thus, the daily periodic rates will range from .017233% to .024657% with corresponding ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATES of 6.25% to 9%.

The applicable ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATES are subject to increase or decrease by the same amount as the annual rate of interest for the pledged savings account is increased or decreased. Moreover, the association may increase or decrease the ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE by increasing or decreasing the percentage rate charged in excess of the interest rate of the pledged savings account after prior notice to the borrower.

In no event can the ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE be less than 1% above the rate of return payable on the pledged account.

The Super market

Name it and you can buy it in CB radios, a hobby one can take up at a minimum of expense or with a sizable investment. Although the popularity of CBs is declining, there are numerous shops in the West End where one can inspect an array of equipment. A motorist can install a CB in his or her car for less than $100.

Handles count in hobby

CBs turned on, tuned in

Citizens band radio operators are alive and well in the West End and just waiting for other operators to put their "ears" on.

Although the many brands of CB radios on the market, enable the buyer to spend to his heart's content, the amateur radio operator can join the shortwave communications hobby for a rather modest sum.

Prices cited by Dave Smith, manager of an Ontario CB radio store, show someone interested in getting "on the air" can do so for about $85 or the enthusiast can spend thousands of dollars for a complex set.

However, Smith cautioned, "If you want quality, that's what you look for. You're going to pay for quality."

Luckily, the amount of equipment needed is minimal.

same frequency, thus giving three ranges on each channel.

What many novice CBers may not know, according to Smith, is that the most important part of the system is not the radio, but the antenna.

"You can't just stick any antenna up there and expect it to work," he said, explaining that the antenna and radio must be "matched."

The best antenna, which sends out the broadest signal and one least susceptible to obstruction from the car itself or a camper body, is a "top-loaded" antenna. This one has the coils at the top rather than in the base, according to Smith.

Before anyone tries to install their own antenna, they should "talk to a professional shop, somebody who knows radios and antennas," he said. Otherwise, the new owner of the equipment may be disappointed, he added.

A mediocre radio with a good antenna will operate much better than a super radio with a poor antenna, he said.

"If you don't have a match (between the radio and antenna), chances are you will burn up your radio," he added.

If the CBER really gets serious, a sizable investment can be made in a "base station," a special model for use at home which contains a special power supply to reduce household current to 12 volts.

A mobile set can be mounted at home with the appropriate transformer to step down the household current, Smith said.

Antennas for home use are a little more expensive, ranging from about $39 to $600, Smith continued.

The last thing a CB operator needs is a license from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which is given free of charge and takes minimal effort to obtain.

An application is available at most stores selling CB radios and the applicant simply fills out the form and mails it to Washington, D.C.

In the meantime, a second form is provided which the applicant completes and carries with him or her as a temporary license until the permanent one, with assigned call letters, arrives.

No test is required. Despite the numerous places where one can buy a CB radio, fewer sets are being sold, according to Farmer.

"There is not the number of CBs being sold as there was a few years ago," she said.

"When something comes out that's a novelty, you do

Dave Smith, manager of Wart Hog CB Radio in Ontario, checks the circuits in a radio that is malfunctioning. Not only is it possible to buy almost anything a CB enthusiast would want, but problems are not major catastrophes as several West End shops service what they sell.

basically a radio and antenna, for which one can get a "cheapie" radio for about $69 and an inexpensive antenna for about about $15.

But, advised Vera Farmer, co-owner of another Ontario store, before investing in a set the buyer should know exactly what he expects of the equipment.

"If they want to get a radio for emergency purposes (to call for help), they can get by with an average radio," she said, adding it is not necessary to buy an expensive set just for listening pleasure.

"To try to shoot skip (broadcast a great distance by bouncing the signal off the ionosphere) and try to compete with everybody else, you're going to need a little better equipment."

The legal CB radio is allowed to broadcast with four watts of power, which under normal conditions will transmit the signal an average of 5 to 10 miles.

Adjustments can be made to sets to boost the power, but radios that have been so adjusted are illegal.

There are also the more expensive "sideband" radios which increase the number of available frequencies from 40 to 120. With a sideband, the broadcaster can not only talk and listen on the central portion of a frequency, but can use the upper and lower portions of that reach a saturation point. You don't sell as many," she observed, saying the tremendous sales earlier were self-generating.

People bought CB sets "because somebody else had one," she said.

Part of the popularity loss, according to both store operators was the FCC, which began cracking down on regulations and forcing CBers to buy 40 channel sets rather than the 23 channel radios which had been used for years.

Farmer said she thinks most of the sales now are to people who need them.

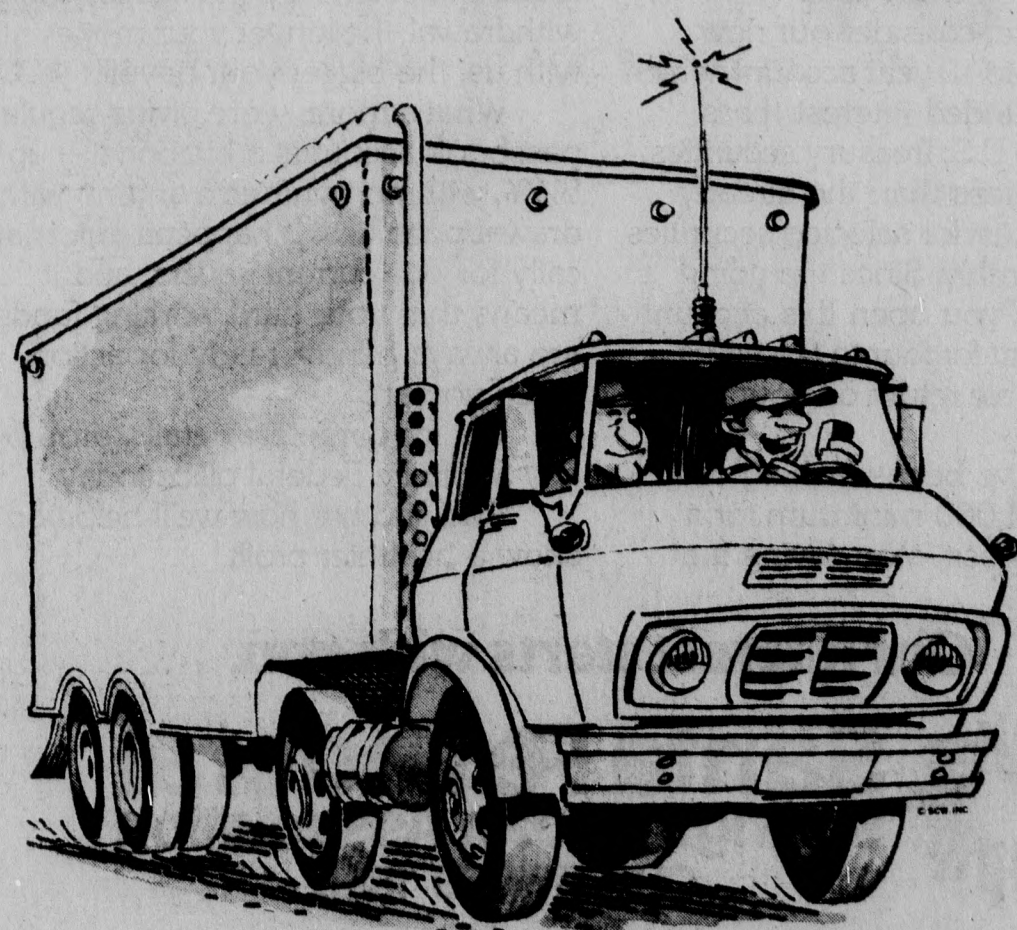

"They (the radios) have a purpose. They've saved a lot of lives, they've helped people out of a lot of bad situations," she said.

There are numerous CB radio clubs and at least two, REACT and MERIT, use CB radios to help motorists and others in distress.

A hobby of CBers and other radio amateurs, is the trading of QSL (which means acknowledge receipt of message) cards. The CBER waits until he hears a distant station then asks the operator to send a card containing the operator's name and call letters.

"It's just a thrill to talk a great distance like that and confirm it with a card," she said, because the card lets sceptics know "you're not just pulling their leg."

In keeping with the fair management's commitment to developing all aspects of community participation, seniors can see the fair Monday through Friday at $1 off the regular price, said Richey.

All persons 62 years of age and older or members of recognized senior citizens organizations will be admitted at the reduced admission price of $1.50.

College thespians to give Neil Simon play

The Chaffey College Theater Arts Department will present a feature performance of Neil Simon's "The Star Spangled Girl," one night only, tonight at 8.

The plot revolves around a young, level headed, athletic southern belle named Sophie Rauschmeyer who has taken up temporary residence in an apartment building in San Francisco. Little does she know that she has moved next door to two left-winged and slightly eccentric bachelors who run an underground newspaper called "Fallout." The trouble begins when she meets one of them in the hall (Norman Cornell). Norman immediately falls in love. And when Norman falls in love, he falls from the highest building he can find. From the first scene, we are led from one hilarious disaster to another, and all the while the other bachelor, Andrew Hobart tries desperately to referee, and keep things together as much as possible.

Sophie is played by Jaime Wilson, a former Montclair High School thespian. This is Jaime's first Chaffey Production. The parts of Andrew and Norman are played by Brian Campbell and Dexter Wash. This is Brian's debut on the Chaffey stage. Dexter is remembered for his recent performance "The Taming of the Shrew" in which he played Biondello.

Tickets are on sale and may be purchased at the box office on campus or reservations can be made by calling 987-1745, extension 322.

Aide to supervisor appointed to fill new post in S.B. county

Baxter Williams, Supervisor Robert O. Townsend's administrative assistant for three and a half years, has been appointed assistant director of the San Bernardino County Economic Development Department.

The 32-year-old Williams was selected for the newly created position from a field of six candidates. He will direct promotional activities and special events, edit the department's newsletter and seek federal grants for industrial development.

Williams joined Townsend's staff in December 1975. From 1970 to 1975, he was the county's first information officer. Before that he worked in a similar job for the city of Commerce.

Williams earned a bachelor's degree in journalism from California State University at Los Angeles, where he was editor of the campus newspaper. He also did graduate work in communications at the University of Southern California.

Baxter Williams has been a valuable asset to my staff during the past four years and I look upon this change in assignment with mixed emotions," Townsend said.

"I'm pleased that Baxter will have an opportunity to use his talents to serve our county. But at the same time, I'm going to miss him."

Williams will be replaced by Ben L. Burrell, the former Chino Justice Court judge who has been Townsend's field representative.

June 21, 1979

Burrell was judge of the Chino Justice Court from 1965 to 1973, when it was upgraded to Municipal Court status. Burrell then became a traffic referee in Municipal Court.

Burrell was a California Highway Patrol officer for 13 years before his election as a judge. He was a correctional officer at the California Institution for Men in Chino from 1947 to 1952.

The 59-year-old Burrell became an assistant to Townsend in late 1977 when Townsend was chairman of the county board of supervisors. He was the first special assistant to the board chairman.

New No-Minimum Certificates

- Affects new certificates of deposit*
- Any amount earns high interest
- Your choice of time schedules

New Passbook Rate 5 1/2%

- 1/4% increase
- Automatic for current savers

New 4-to-10 Year Account

- No minimum deposit
- High interest linked to U.S. Treasury securities

On July 1, Santa Fe Federal Savings introduces a highly interesting trio of ways to save money.

And they're for people who want to start small — but who also want to earn in a big way — especially in terms of the high interest we can offer.

For instance, consider our new no-minimum 4-to-10 year account, which returns compounded interest that's set according to U.S. Treasury securities. It pays you 1% less than the already substantial interest for selected securities, announced monthly. Since the going rate at the time you open this account remains constant for four to ten years, it means a sizeable return on your secure investment.

And if you've been stashing cash to get the old $1,000 minimum for a certificate of deposit, stop saving it at home. Because we're eliminating that requirement, too. Just bring any amount to Santa Fe Federal, take your pick of time plans — and we'll make sure your dollars earn top dollar.

Of course, while federal regulations require substantial penalties for early withdrawal, the longer your money stays with us, the bigger your payoff.

What's more, we're giving regular passbook accounts a big boost — up to 5 1/2%, with no minimum and no withdrawal penalties. It happens automatically for our current savers, and it means that your hard-working funds are always handy, ready for action when you are.

But for complete details, drop by any Santa Fe Federal office today.

And find out how we'll help you show a healthier profit.

Our interest starts with you.

Architectural photography can deceive

By JERRY WINDLE
Copley News Service

Architectural photography is deceiving. I say that because when we see these pictures in magazines or newspapers, they always look natural and simple. What we don't realize is the amount of behind-the-scenes work done to make these pictures appear that way.

Architectural photography could be classified into two categories: realistic and abstract.

I want to direct my comments to the abstract aspect of architectural photography because that is the one most of us will be involved with due to the equipment we have to work with.

Professional architectural photographers are involved in the "real" type of photography, and their equipment consists of a large format (4x5-inch negatives or larger) view camera. This camera requires a tripod and features adjustments through the use of swinging front and back of camera to virtually eliminate distortion.

That in itself is another story, and if you are interested in pursuing architectural photography or the use of a view camera, I would direct you to the library's photo book section or the one at your local camera store.

So, using our own cameras, what can we expect to accomplish against the pros?

Actually, quite a lot. We get into the abstract or "interpretive" type of photography. Here we use what the professional tries to eliminate — distortion. We use the wide-angle lens to emphasize distortion. We make the tops of buildings converge into a point. We make walls smaller at the top than at the bottom.

We use radical lighting effects, crosslighting, back-lighting. We include the sun in our pictures and so on and so on. In short, we try to make our picture more dramatic and eye-catching by directing the viewer's eye to an angle not usually perceived by the human eye.

But there are drawbacks: we don't want to get too radical or else we lose contact with our subject.

Ian Dryden chose the more traditional approach for his photograph of the Taj Mahal. Balancing the whiteness of the structure with the blue sky in the background and placing the distant tower slightly off center, he came up with an interesting composition. Strong early morning light created interesting shadows on the building. The wetness of the walk adds to the photo as well in creating a reflection on the walk.

Thane McIntosh created his dramatic theater interior using a wide-angle lens and a time exposure. In this case, the wide-angle lens adds to the effect by adding distortion. Note how the column on the left "leans" into the picture. Also the column in the background. Everything is aiming to a point at the top of the picture.

Actually, a time exposure (one-half second and longer) will often create some dramatic effects, especially in color without any additional lighting. Such was the case here. Flash would have been useless in such a large auditorium. That is, unless McIntosh could have strung several units to light up the whole room. But by having all the lights turned on and using a time exposure, he was able to create this dramatic picture.

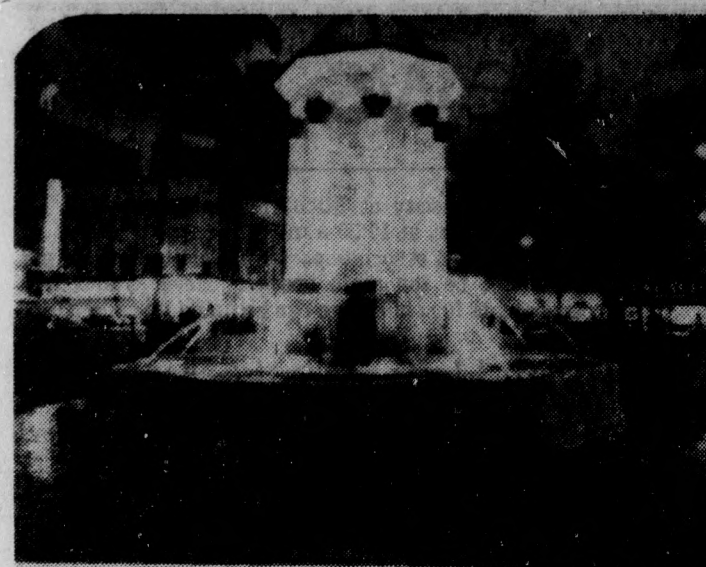

Time exposures require a tripod, cable release and a lot of luck. You should make several exposures and keep track of what you have done so you have a starting point next time.

With basically the same approach, I made the picture of the fountain just at dusk. Using ASA 400 film, I was able to hand-hold the camera at 1-30th of a second to make the proper exposure.

When you see an architectural photograph in a publication, it looks natural and simple. After all, there's no posing and the subject isn't going to move or run away. But there's a lot of behind-the-scenes work needed to get a successful architectural photo. Today's column tells you how these pictures were taken.

Very often, time of day plays an important role. Early morning and later afternoon light can be very dramatic. Dusk is an especially nice time to make pictures because there is still enough light to allow usable hand-held shutter speeds and f-stops while still being able to capture any artificial light, such as the colored lights on the fountain. Dusk also helps to eliminate cluttered backgrounds.

My last example, by Ian Dryden, crosses the border in the abstract realm and is almost surrealistic in its approach. Aiming the camera into the sun, using a wide-angle lens, stark shadows, a converging lines all contribute to an interpretation of building architecture.

Again the point is made that photography is a very personal craft and one of the best ways we can express ourselves.

Even locked gas cap won't stop thieves from siphoning gasoline

By JEFF KRUPSAW
Staff Writer

Three cars, brimming with gasoline, sit on a driveway in residential Ontario. It is mid-afternoon.

A flat-bed truck pulls up to the curb near the cars. Two men exit the vehicle with a large can and a black hose in hand. They discover that one of the three automobiles does not have a locking gas cap. Minutes later the pair is seen re-entering their truck with can and hose.

A typical case of gas siphoning. "We've had an increase in theft of gas from other people's tanks," Sgt.

J.T. Coffman of the Ontario Police Department said. "There really isn't much you can do - people have bought locking gas caps. The main thing people can do is be aware."

Coffman and most of the area's other law-enforcement officials say that the increased number of reported gas siphoning incidents are directly related to the gas shortage.

Sgt. Craig Treber of the Montclair Police Department said that after waiting in line for gas, people are more likely to report the loss of five gallons of gas than if gas was readily available.

"Gas is going for a buck a gallon," Capt. W.C. Simmons of the Ontario

Police Department said. "It's worth protecting."

The question is how?

"Well, of course, they can buy locking gas caps; there is quite a run on gas caps," deputy John Richards of the West End Sheriff's Department said. "They can take a little better care of where they park their cars. Some people have more than one car and don't even bother to park their cars in the garage."

What if you can not find a locking gas cap for your car and you do not have a garage?

"There are several devices on the market," Simmons said. "They have springs that prevent hoses from being siphoned. The best thing you can do is park your car in the garage. If you don't have a garage put your car somewhere where it is well-lit."

Locking gas caps, however, are not infallible.

"If they want in, a locking cap is not going to stop them," said Bob Haggie, manager of a local auto parts store. Haggie, who has sold close to 125 locking caps in the past two weeks said that he has very few caps still available. But he said if a person wants one bad enough there are places to buy them. He suggested automotive departments of stores and gas stations.

But again, Haggie said the caps are not foolproof.

"There is some way of prying the caps off," he said.

Sgt. Coffman says you have to be alert.

"If you hear noise at night, get out of bed and see what it is," he said. "When I hear my dog bark I go out and see what it is."

The public can help themselves and the police, Treber said, by reporting the incidents they see to the police. He said information such as a description of the thieves and the car they are using as well as the location and the type car the gas is taken from is helpful.

Besides gas theft, the lack of gas has contributed to many minor accidents, according to Coffman, but few major incidents have been reported.

Valerie Dalton, 11, and John McMinn, 12, both sixth-graders at Magnolia School in Upland, participate in a simulated run across the nation which students in Room 16 have been making since September. Class members, starting from the West Coast, have run the distance to Illinois. Eventual goal is the Eastern Seaboard. The school's interest in running began several years ago with the state and presidential physical fitness tests. (Staff photo)

Banquet honors CRC students

Key speaker at the annual awards banquet of the California Rehabilitation Center at Norco, 1978-79, was Jimmy Powell, former resident, now successfully employed in Ventura.

The banquet, held May 24, honored outstanding students of CRC and those who have successfully completed vocational, academic, and GED programs this year.

Martha Berry of the clerical vocational word processing center was selected Outstanding Woman Student of the year. Outstanding Male Student is John Ryan of the dry cleaning department. From the large food services center, Clyde Thompson was selected outstanding for the year.

Felipe Delao, supervisor of vocational instruction, and Ray Koehler, associate superintendent of CRC, presented trophy awards to the 27 honor students from the nine vocational departments: air conditioning, auto mechanics, building maintenance, clerical, drafting, dry cleaning, printing, upholstery, and X-ray. In 1978-79, 196 certificates were awarded.

Donald P. Sanders, supervisor of vocational instruction, food services, and James Scharosch, business manager of CRC, presented trophy awards honoring the 12 outstanding students from the six food services departments. There have been 37 food skill graduates during the year June 1978 through May 1979.

Powell outlined tips on "How to make it" on the road to successful employment outside. He warned that success depends on reconditioning the individual mind. "It's the heart that counts," said Powell. "Stay away from the first negative contact and there will be no second."

Charlene Silva, supervisor of academic instruction; James Pfeiffer, director of adult education Corona - Norco, and Norma Law, associate superintendent presented trophy awards to nine outstanding academic students.

Forty-four of the year's record-making 130 GED graduates were present to get their certificates.

Area teacher joins lobbyists in capital

By STEVE STANDERFER
Staff Writer

A Chaffey High School teacher has acquired a firsthand look at political processes in Washington, D.C., where he recently helped lobby for a federal department of education.

Bill Pitts, a mathematics teacher, was picked for a National Education Association lobbying group as a result of his work as state legislation chairman for the California Teachers Association.

The NEA and CTA are two of the many groups pushing to separate the education branch from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). Under two almost identical bills, one created in the House of Representatives and the other in the Senate, a Department of Education would be formed to give education officials direct access to the president.

Pitts said he found the trip "interesting" because he and others met with politicians and got a feeling for how lobbyist function on the federal level.

Surprisingly, most decisions are made outside the Senate and House galleries, Pitts said. It can be a disappointment for a visitor to expect to see a full gallery but instead only find a few legislators making speeches "just for the record."

Pitts met with different legislators, including Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th District, and Sen. Alan Cranston, and members of President Carter's staff in the White House.

Since "technically it's Carter's bill" for the Department of Education, the president's staff briefed the 43-member group on lobby strategy.

The Chaffey teacher said the president favors the bill because reorganization of HEW is long overdue. Pitts said HEW spends about a third of the federal government's budget.

An inspector general's 1978 report on HEW revealed waste amounting to $7.4 million a year, mostly as a result of fraud and overpayment in health and welfare programs.

Pitts claims education is completely lost in HEW and the Department of Education would not need an increase in staff or budget.

In fact, a report by NEA President John Ryor said the creation of a Department of Education would eliminate duplication in some jobs resulting in cuts in expenses.

The creation "would probably create another federal bureaucracy," Pitts admitted, "but it would be breaking up a bigger federal bureaucracy."

It's important for educators to be represented in the cabinet and to make concerns known directly to the president instead of "going through several layers of bureaucracy," Pitts said.

Eddi Mae Taylor, left, and Vicky Kelly, newly installed chairperson and vice chairperson of the Ontario-Montclair School District parent advisory council, share a happy moment together during an end-of-the-year potluck and recognition luncheon held last week. The district advisory council is made up of parents who are active in district schools which receive funding for educationally disadvantaged children. (Staff photo)

Craftsman Ed Huson of Los Angeles solders gold-plated brass tubing that will become the framework for one of the tiny, intricate crystal chandeliers he sells to miniature collectors and buyers.

tricate crystal chandeliers he sells to miniature collectors and buyers.

Think small means big business

By JODY TUBB
Copley News Service
LOS ANGELES — Ed and Peg Huson are small-minded.

That isn't to say they're narrow-minded or closed-minded or simple-minded. It just means that while some people believe in thinking big, they believe in thinking little.

And that makes them part of one of the biggest businesses going.

The Husons make and collect miniatures — tiny, accurate reproductions of furniture, everyday objects and even clothing that end up in growing numbers of homes around the country.

Once only the pastime of royalty, miniature collecting is today the passion of housewives, career women, doctors and lawyers, farmers and plumbers and thousands of others.

The hobby has become so popular that it has its own fan clubs, and there's a miniature show somewhere almost every weekend of the year.

The Husons say there are miniature collections worth a small fortune — tens of thousands of dollars — not only in the United States but in Europe and Asia as well.

Peg, who like her husband, is confined to a wheelchair, started her own collection 10 years ago. She remembers saving up for months to buy a special piece that had won her heart.

"We were living in Boston then, and there wasn't much money to spare, so I wasn't able to buy very often," she says.

"But every time I saved some money, I spent it on miniatures. It was a lot of fun for me."

In the beginning, she bought whatever she liked and could afford, regardless of the time period it represented. Later she limited her collection primarily to Louis XV pieces, which she recognized with the help of an antiques book.

Meanwhile, her husband Ed watched her.

"I'd see her saving her pennies to buy one of those tiny things, and I'd say to myself, 'Hey, I could make that for her,'" he said. "That went on for seven years before I did anything about it."

It wasn't until after the Husons moved West that he put his words into action. With a pocketknife as his only tool, he created a remarkably small inlaid wood chess table and a complete set of chessmen.

Using a scale of one inch to one foot, the chessmen measured about one-eighth inch in diameter. The project took a week of hard, tedious work.

"I displayed it in a miniature show just for the heck of it, and a dealer paid $25 for it right away," he says, still sounding a bit incredulous. "All of a sudden, everyone was ordering them."

Three years later, there still are back orders tacked onto a bookcase in Huson's workroom. Most of them are for the intricate crystal chandeliers and the Louis XV desks for which he now is known in miniature circles.

The chandeliers are made from gold-plated brass tubing and Austrian cut crystal — 1,100 crystals per chandelier, to be exact.

Each actually lights. The "candles" are made of electrical connectors, and the mini-bulbs — each smaller than a grain of rice — are replaceable.

"I'd done some electrical work before, and that helped me with the mechanics of the chandelier," he says. "But one of the first things I learned is that it's much easier to wire normal-size things than small ones."

Huson works three full days on each chandelier and charges $250 to $350.

His detailed Louis XV drop-front desks require even more time — up to three weeks. They are made of bass wood and feature tiny cubbyholes, brass hinges and carvings on the delicate legs.

They are fashioned with tools a bit more advanced than the pocketknife Huson first used, but the workroom hardly resembles a factory. It includes only a lathe, a table saw and a scroll saw.

Peg finishes the desks, rubbing them with stain and applying gold paint to the reliefs on the legs.

The finished products sell for $110 apiece.

Who buys them?

"Just about anybody," she says. "There isn't a typical collector, anyone can get hooked. Many people are surprised to learn there are as many male collectors as female."

These days the Husons add to their collection mainly by trading instead of buying. Peg calls her husband a "great swapper" and points to a display case of Lilliputian objects to prove it.

Among them are minute cotton gloves, incredibly tiny steel knives with polished wood handles and wooden goblets turned on a regular size lathe. The goblets are so thin that they are nearly transparent.

"The people who make these things are excellent craftsmen," Huson says proudly.

Most of them, he adds, do not even try to unspool the red tape that goes with getting their creations copyrighted. As a result, he says, many original objects are copied.

"But no matter how big or small it is, you can always tell a copy," he says. "Collectors who recognize quality won't buy cheap imitations."

Seven to eight hours said best

Sleep problems, mortality link

By LEW SCARR

Copley News Service
Data from a six-year study show that adults who slept less than four hours a night had a 180 percent greater danger of dying during the six years than those who slept seven to eight hours, a researcher has reported.

And, according to Dr. Daniel F. Kripke, adults who slept 10 hours or more a night are 80 percent more likely to die prematurely than the seven- to eight-hour sleepers.

In fact, Kripke reports, sleep problems are almost as strongly associated with mortality as heart disease and diabetes.

Kripke, director of the Sleep Disorders Clinic at the Veterans Administration Hospital in San Diego, published his study in a recent issue of Archives of General Psychiatry.

He has drawn his findings from an American Cancer Society study begun in 1959 which, in addition to sleep patterns, also linked cigarette smoking to heart disease and cancer.

The study shows a major health risk associated with long and short nightly sleep periods, but Kripke said it is a mistake to conclude that those abnormal periods in themselves actually cause death.

He said further research is needed to determine the causes.

He said that subjects studied who reported using sleeping pills often were about 50 percent more likely to have died during the course of the study than those who said they never took sleeping pills.

"You might think," Kripke said, "from the greatly increased mortality associated with short sleep, that sleeping pills might improve people's chances."

He said, however, that, since the study, many of the sleeping pills have been replaced by new medications and the risk and benefits of these are not measured.

Kripke studied data collected from more than one million adults 30 and older who responded to the questionnaires sent out by the American Cancer Society.

Kripke focused on the number of hours the subjects normally slept each night, whether and how often they had insomnia and how frequently they used sleeping pills.

Most of the participants who complained of insomnia also indicated they slept approximately seven or eight hours a night.

Kripke interprets this as supporting sleep clinic findings that many insomniacs actually have difficulty falling asleep, or waken frequently during the night but, overall, sleep normal amounts of time.

The combination of these findings led Kripke to conclude "A complaint of insomnia may not be a valid indication that a patient is at risk, unless he customarily sleeps less than seven hours a night."

The relationship of abnormal sleeping habits to premature death was extended when participants in the study were subdivided according to age, sex and physical problems such as heart disease.

The mortality ratio for those who slept long or short periods of time was higher in each of the subdivisions.

Kripke said the data from the study underlines the need for comprehensive, long-term investigations of the benefits and dangers of sleeping prescriptions.

"Since the results suggest that the risks of sleep medications might be serious," he said, "and, on the other hand, the benefits of correcting curtailed sleep could be quite large, it is critical that these research efforts be made."

Kripke estimated that 27 million prescriptions for sleeping pills are issued every year in the United States and that as many as 11 percent of the American population use some kind of medicinal sleep inducement.

Kripke's study suggests that the closer a person can come to getting eight hours of sleep a night the better.

Still he feels that future research efforts should determine the most beneficial length of sleep, if regular sleep is important, which treatments for abnormal sleep patterns are best and what the longer term consequences of sleep remedies are.

Unanswered, too, is the question of whether a person who habitually sleeps 10 hours a night can better his or her chances of living longer by waking to an alarm every day after eight hours of sleep.

Mike Curb assesses his role in California politics

By STEVE WIEGAND
Copley News Service

SACRAMENTO — The office looks much the same as any government official's, marked by a systematic clutter of paper and large U.S. and California flags behind the desk.

Outside the office, the official's wife — eight months pregnant — sits waiting. "I'm getting used to waiting," she shrugs and smiles, patting her abdomen.

Inside, the official loosens his tie, sips a soft drink and tries to look relaxed.

"I feel," says Lt. Gov. Mike Curb, "that I'm in control of the situation."

Curb's reference to "the situation" is not directed at his wife's pregnancy. Instead, the 34-year-old record producer-turned-politician is talking about his role in a drama unique in California politics.

In his first elective office, Curb is a Republican lieutenant governor serving under a Democratic governor who is also running for president.

Besieged by members of his party to exercise his powers as acting governor, Curb has appointed one judge, threatened to appoint others and vowed to call a special election on school busing and spending limit proposals as soon as Brown leaves the state again.

Those actions have antagonized the governor to the point that he has filed suit with the intention of stripping Curb of most of his powers as acting governor.

And the publicity the conflict has generated has made

Curb the most visible lieutenant governor in years.

At the age of 19, Curb jingled ("You meet the nicest people on a Honda") his way into his own record company. Within 10 years, Curb had parlayed recording such artists as the Osmonds, Pat Boone and Sammy Davis Jr. into a $20 million-plus recording empire.

With musically made money, the backing of state GOP kingmakers and a sometimes-vicious campaign against incumbent Mervyn Dymally, Curb was elected lieutenant governor by more than 500,000 votes.

"I didn't anticipate the controversy," he said by way of defending his judicial appointment and other clashes with Brown, "but I think it's been healthy controversy."

"By stating my position on these issues, I've forced the governor to focus on them in a manner that he wouldn't have ordinarily done. I think from that standpoint it helps to achieve the balance I think voters were looking for when they voted for a governor from one party and a lieutenant governor from the other."

But the controversy between Curb and Brown has also overshadowed Curb's energetic attempts to carry out two of the four big pledges he made during his campaign against Dymally.

The two pledges were to revive the state's business climate through the Economic Development Commission and to better the state's relations with Baja California through the Commission of the Californias, both of which Curb heads as lieutenant governor.

"We've taken strong steps with the EDC," Curb said. "Assemblyman Bill Lockyer, D-San Leandro, has introduced a bill that would make the EDC the chief advisory body to the Department of Business and Development, and that would be a major step."

The Commission of the Californias — a group of public and private sector officials once described as "little more than a margarita-drinking society" — recently conducted "its most successful meeting ever," according to Curb.

"We have a great rapport with the Mexican officials," he said. "We have already started a study of the undocumented-worker problem, which we will report to both the Mexican and American federal governments."

The commission is also scheduled to announce a grant to study fishing problems common to both Californias, Curb said.

In addition, Curb has formed a new commission on agriculture, designed to help the state's various agricultural interests find common ground on issues that affect them all, such as water and the use of pesticides.

But Curb has found two other campaign pledges harder to live up to.

One was that he would take an active interest in the state Senate by presiding over a majority of its sessions.

Dymally, he charged, had shown his lack of interest in the lieutenant governor's office by not attending many sessions of the Senate, over which the lieutenant governor is constitutionally empowered to preside.

So far, according to Senate members and Capitol reporters, Curb has yet to preside over a Senate session.

"The reason I haven't," Curb said, "is that we're waiting on an opinion from the attorney general on whether it would be a conflict of interest for me to preside over the Senate when I'm serving as acting governor so much."

State Attorney General George Deukmejian's response to Curb's explanation: "I don't know anything about such a request."

Actually, say Capitol observers, Curb's absence from the Senate is by mutual consent. Senators — used to running their own show — don't particularly want Curb around. And Curb has found he really doesn't have the time to spend in the Senate.

"It's almost impossible to do everything," Curb acknowledged. "People want so much. We have had almost 450 speaking engagements requested in just one month. Just to turn them down in writing takes a lot of time."

Curb is also finding that it takes a lot of time to meet his campaign pledge to divest himself of business interests.

Despite repeated assurances that he would forsake the record business for government, Curb continues to take an active hand in his company, Mike Curb Productions.

"First of all," he said somewhat heatedly, "I'm a full-time lieutenant governor. I don't think there's anyone who questions that."

"I've already taken steps to reorganize the company ... but I don't think anyone expects an elected official to give up everything he owns the day he's elected."

Wounding of daughter causes a guilt crisis for the Kubis family

By Jon Funabiki
Copley News Service
SAN DIEGO — Eleven-year-old Juleen Kubis can't remember the pain, only a ringing in her ears when the rifle bullet tore through her face.
She doesn't remember screaming.
"It wasn't a death scream," recalls her 16-year-old brother, Scott. "It was a hollering."
That sound was his first hint that the bullet — which had discharged accidentally from a .22-caliber rifle he was putting away in his parents' bedroom — had struck his sister, who was watching Saturday morning television in the living room below.
The slug had pierced the bedroom's hardwood floor, then drilled into Juleen's nose. Tiner than the top of her little finger, the bullet bored through the palate of her mouth and her tongue, then glanced off the hyoid, a cluster of small bones at the base of her tongue.
The shock stole her voice — "I couldn't talk," Juleen says, telling the story now.
When he saw his sister's bloodstained face moments later, Scott says, he "freaked out."
That was Jan. 20.
The shock pitched Scott — and his parents as well — into a chasm of guilt that they worked hard to overcome even as they agonized over fears that Juleen might never talk again — and wondered whether they could have prevented the accident.
It would lead Scott to miss school and to begin sleeping at the foot of his parents' bed, sometimes waking at night, crying out his sister's name.
Later, when Juleen came home after 12 days in the hospital — with her voice restored — he would sleep near her to comfort her during the night.
Today, Juleen is recovered and back at school, where classmates gave her a surprise party. Rowe Rhea, her teacher, calls Juleen "the bravest little girl I have ever seen."
Her family has recovered, too. And, they say, they have grown from the experience.
"Our love bonds are greater," says Juleen's father, Walt Kubis.
He and his wife, Evelyn, are teachers. Their family includes another daughter, Kendra, 19.
Their house, on a quiet, shrub-covered hillside in suburban Poway, is flanked by a stand of young pine trees Walt and his son planted.
On the morning of the accident, Juleen, whose pets include a boa constrictor and a mouse originally bought as snake food, had wanted to go to the North County Wildlife Rescue and Treatment Society, where she does volunteer work on Saturdays. Her mother told her to stay home since she was recovering from the flu.
So she watched television, sitting on a couch in the living room. From the balcony of the bedroom above, Scott, a football player at Poway High School, where he is a junior, had just fired the rifle to scare away squirrels gnawing at the groundcover plants protecting the hillside.
Instead of a shell with a solid bullet, he had fired a plastic-tipped shot — shell filled with tiny birdshot, since he didn't want to kill the squirrels, only scare them away. Walt notes that was the reason they purchased the rifle.
When Scott brought the rifle back into the room where his parents were to put it away, he ejected the spent cartridge, unaware that the action also moved a solid slug bullet from the magazine into the chamber.

"I went to hit the safety because my father always told me to put the safety on," Scott said. "The trigger went off."
Then they heard Juleen, and Scott flew down the stairs.
"I didn't know what happened," Juleen says. "I ran up the stairs. I couldn't talk. So I pounded on the walls to try to get their attention."
They met halfway.
Walt and Evelyn say Scott screamed, "I killed her," and ran outside to the poolside patio. Later, when paramedics arrived, he hid in his bedroom closet and cried.

As Juleen underwent surgery at Kaiser Hospital, Scott said he was a walking "zombie."
In a sense, all the Kubises felt a certain measure of guilt. Walt railed at himself for leaving cartridges in the magazine of the rifle. Evelyn wondered whether she should have let Juleen go to the wildlife center. Scott didn't know if he had handled the gun properly.
At Kaiser a nurse suggested Scott see a "crisis counselor."
Jim Sutton — a member of Kaiser's crisis intervention team, a group of counselors who help people through traumatic situations — met with Scott, and later his parents.
"He (Sutton) said, 'Let's face it, no matter what I tell you, you will still have guilt feelings,'" Scott said, adding that he stayed home from school a week because he couldn't cope with the questions that came from classmates.

"But he said it wasn't my fault."
Sutton said the family's "solidarity" helped them get through the crisis more than anything else. Guilt feelings, he said, actually help a person get over a trauma like the one the Kubises faced. His job is to help them recognize that.
"Guilt feeling is sort of like saying 'Hail Mary,'" he explained. "It's part of the penance."
Family discussions also helped the Kubis family.
"We were sort of talking out our problems, which is what the crisis counselor told us to do," Scott said. "It's good. It's not fair for anyone to have the whole burden."

For Scott, however, the most meaningful salve came from Juleen herself, when she looked at him from her hospital bed and said: "It's OK."
"I felt sorry for my brother because I knew how he felt, in a way," she said. "He felt guilty. But it wasn't anybody's fault."
Only a few reminders of the episode remain.
The bullet hole in the bedroom floor has not been patched.
Juleen has a small scar on her nose and another one on her neck.
Her voice used to be, in her words, "high and squeaky." Now it is deeper.
Scott and Juleen are closer than they have ever been. So, too, is the rest of the family.
"You appreciate your family more," older sister Kendra observed. "I appreciate her more now because she was almost gone."

Varied reasons told why airport panel hasn't met

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The West Valley Airport Land Use Commission usually meets the second Wednesday of the month at Upland City Hall.

It has not met since March 14 and did not meet this week, but its chairman and staff disagreed Monday on the reasons why.

Bill Bottin — chairman of the county commission and Upland city councilman — reiterated a pledge he made in March not to chair the land-use commission until the county provides legal counsel at the meetings.

Jim DeAguilera, senior planner for the commission, and John Jaquess, its assistant executive director, said the commission has not been meeting in the last three months because there has been no reason to call a meeting.

DeAguilera noted the two-man staff "only stretches so far" and that commission meetings have been put off while he and Jaquess concentrate their time on helping a local steering committee develop a land-use plan for Cable Airport in Upland.

The steering committee may wrap up its final draft at a June 27 meeting and the commission would consider the proposal sometime in July, DeAguilera added.

Jaquess pointed out no development proposals are currently pending that warrant the commission's review. The commission's bylaws say it will meet the second Wednesday of the month, but do not mandate a meeting be held if unneeded, he added.

Although the chairman has the power to convene the commission, in practice the meetings are usually scheduled by the staff, Jaquess said.

Bottin has cited concern over potential liability of the commission for its decisions on appropriate land use near an airport.

Although the commission is a recommending body, a four-fifths vote of a city council is needed to overrule its recommendation rather than the simple majority usually needed to approve development plans.

Bottin said Monday, "The reason we have not been meeting is because we have not had legal counsel to represent us at meetings."

He added that he would like to see the commission have a county attorney present at its meetings the same way a city attorney is on hand to answer questions from a city council.

Bottin held out the possibility of the commission meeting to conduct reviews without formal action if legal counsel is not present.

However, he said his concern extends beyond the current consideration of a land-use plan for Cable Airport.

With legal counsel, he added, the commission would have been meeting in recent months to keep up with the steering committee's progress on the Cable land-use plan. Bottin said he is unsure whether the commission is falling behind on its work by not meeting.

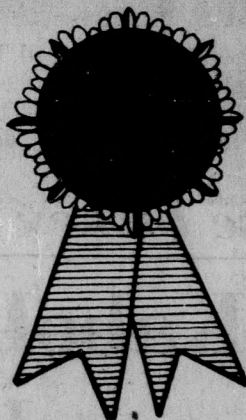

DeAguilera said the commission's request for legal counsel to regularly attend its meeting was rejected by County Counsel Alan Marks due to budget and staff limits.

However, he and Clark Alsop — attorney for the county counsel's office assigned to commission matters — said legal advice is available as needed, including Alsop's attendance at meetings.

Alsop noted, "Airport land-use commissions have operated for many years in the three areas (of the county) and we have never provided a representative as a routine matter at all the meetings."

New Hispanic organization begins membership drive for West End

El Congreso para Pueblos Unidos (Congress for United Communities), an organization aimed at expanding political and economic representation of Hispanics, has begun a membership drive and formed a chapter in the West End.

Armando Navarro, recently elected president of CPU, said, "With our membership rapidly increasing it is imperative that chapters be formed in as many communities as possible throughout Southern California."

Chapters have been formed in Colton and the West End, and others are planned in Redlands, Riverside, Corona, Indio, Baldwin Park, Pacoima, San Diego and other areas by September, he added.

He said, "The intent is obvious. Latinos need to be well organized and prepared politically to have a major role to play in determining the outcome of elections at the local, state and national levels in 1980 — particularly the presidential election.

"How well we do in the elections in 1980 will greatly determine the amount of influence we will have throughout the decade."

CPU's goals include promoting organization, leadership, unity and vision needed to prepare the "Latino community for power and positive change," he said.

Navarro added that the organization hopes to have a broadly based membership — including professionals, businessmen, students, workers and the poor — as a national organization.

Officers were elected last week for the West End chapter. They are: Maria Guillen of Ontario, president; Paul Gomez of Upland, vice president; Cindy Jaurequi of Chino, secretary, and Ernie Gracia of Ontario, treasurer.

Guillen said this week the chapter will concentrate initially on promoting membership in CPU and then on organizing subcommittees on various concerns. She mentioned leadership development, law, employment and unfair labor practices as possible examples.

Guillen added that CPU hopes to "zero in on political consciousness, not in terms of power but change."

"Not in the sense of power so much as being able to claim basic rights that are ours as American citizens," she said.

Getting Hispanic school board members to place greater emphasis on affirmative action in employment and businesses to "no longer exploit" the Latino community were cited as specific examples by Guillen.

She noted the National Institute for Community Development, founded by Navarro serves as an umbrella organization for CPU.

The local chapter will meet 7:30 p.m. June 26 at Ontario City Library, 215 E. C St.

CPU was founded in November 1977. Navarro pointed to several successful organizing efforts by the organization so far, including members' efforts to help elect Ralph Hernandez to the San Bernardino City Council as a write-in candidate this May.

Judges take office despite code violation

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Despite a residency requirement of the state code peculiar to San Bernardino County, two appointees to municipal court seats are assuming office this month.

Dana Henry was sworn in June 8 as a judge for the Valley Division of San Bernardino Municipal Court in Fontana and scheduled to assume full-time duties today.

Trevor Hamilton said last week he will be sworn in June 29 as a judge for the Victorville division of the municipal court.

Their appointments in April by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. prompted questions over little-known residency provisions of state law regarding municipal court judges in San Bernardino County.

Both Henry and Hamilton now reside in the court divisions they will serve, but neither lived in their division prior to appointment as called for in one section of the code.

However, officials have noted a trend toward striking down residency requirements and some questioned whether the provision is valid.

The code states, "The judges of a municipal court and the judges, constables and deputy constables of a justice court shall be residents eligible to vote in the judicial district or city and county in which they are elected or appointed for a period of at least 54 days prior to the date of their election or appointment."

That 54-day requirement has apparently been modified to 30 days through a court decision on the election code, according to Dick Martland, deputy attorney general.

Martland advised the governor's office in April concerning the residency questions.

For the purposes of San Bernardino County alone among the state's 58 counties, state law defines "judicial districts" as the court divisions for the county municipal court.

Martland said last week he found nothing to indicate the residency requirement itself is invalid. After noting that a court case threw out a local residency requirement in excess of 30 days he referred to the county municipal court provisions, saying "nevertheless, it is a requirement."

Under the circumstances, however, the residency questions may be moot, he added.

Since both Henry and Hamilton have fulfilled the residency requirement before taking office, the only question remaining is whether a second commission — in effect, another appointment — is necessary, Martland said.

He said, "As far as I'm concerned it's a moot point."

Henry said she lived in Fontana 54 days prior to her swearing-in June 8. The Henry family now has a condominium in Fontana and has been trying to sell its home in Hidden Hills, a community in the San Fernando Valley, she said. The couple also has a home in Lake Arrowhead.

She said she believes she has "established residency in good faith and in accordance with the code."

She also noted residency requirements for justice court judges and superior court judges failed court tests, adding that residency requirements generally have been eliminated or modified by the courts.

"My personal feeling is that residency has very little to do with how well you serve. It's what you do sitting on that bench — not where you sleep at night," Henry said.

Anthony Kline, Brown's legal affairs secretary, said this morning second commissions have not been issued but could be.

However, he questioned the legality of the residency provisions and said that Henry and Hamilton had fulfilled the requirements by living in their districts before taking office "even indulging the dubious assumption there was an invalidity to begin with."

Hamilton said he took an apartment in Hesperia shortly after his appointment and was closing escrow on a lot for a home there. Hesperia is within the Victorville court division.

Hamilton, a resident of Highland before his appointment, said he has made his new residence known to the governor's office and termed a second commission "probable" before he takes office.

However, he described that decision as pending in the governor's office.

Martland said "my gut reaction" is that a second appointment is probably unnecessary, and neither Henry or Hamilton's appointment has been challenged.

Jewell McGrogan was installed president of Preceptor Upsilon May 24 at the home of outgoing President Phoebe Richards. Other officers to be installed include Barbara Huber, vice president; Kathy Hunter, recording secretary; Lois Schwartz, corresponding secretary and FAC representative; Jane Hart, treasurer; and Marly Plyley, civil awareness. ### Chaffey College graduation June 23

"Say not, 'I have found the truth,' but rather, 'I have found a truth'." is part of the message chosen by the Chaffey College Student Advisory council to illustrate the theme of their 1979 graduation ceremony: Self Knowledge. It is taken from the chapter "Knowledge" in The Prophet by Kahlil Gibran.

Over 800 students will graduate with an Associate in Arts or an Associate in Science degree on June 23 at 6 p.m. The ceremony will be held on the lawn in the center of the college campus. Richard Armour, well-known writer and humorist, will be the guest speaker.

These luscious Herbed Turkey and Vegetable Kabobs make a wonderful outdoor meal. This recipe stretches the meat dollars and capitalizes on flavor. Add some hot bread and fruit and cheese for dessert to complete the menu.

Use turkey meat

Kabobs are delicious, stretch the budget

Throughout the Mediterranean countries, as well as in India and elsewhere, people have traditionally cooked small pieces or cubes of meat on a stick over an open fire for as long as history has been recorded — and perhaps longer.

Today it's still happening, as people grill kabobs on the patio or in the backyard. One reason remains the same, to make protein foods go farther. But today there are other reasons, including the fact that kabobs are a delicious way to add variety to family and company menus.

To capitalize on flavor and stretch your meat dollars, choose turkey from California often and serve the economical and versatile bird in many ways. Serving turkey no longer means only roasting a whole bird for the holidays, and nothing illustrates that better than these luscious Herbed Turkey and Vegetable Kabobs.

In this case, turkey means the luxurious, yet practical, turkey tenderloins that are available in most markets. The prime tenderloin or filet, all white meat, is completely edible with no bone or fat waste. It's ideal for slicing or cutting, lending itself well to everything from stir-fried dishes to these kabobs.

Here, the delicate flavor of the turkey tenderloin is enhanced by a flavorful herbed butter. The same herbed butter is also used to baste the vegetables that make this virtually a meal-in-one recipe. While chunks of turkey and zucchini grill together on six skewers, six additional skewers hold fresh mushroom caps, squares of green pepper, onion pieces and cherry tomatoes. Each serving consists of one turkey-zucchini kabob and one vegetable kabob.

Herbed Turkey and Vegetable Kabobs

2 turkey tenderloins, about 1 1/2

- pounds
1 medium onion
12 large fresh mushrooms, 1 1/2 inches in diameter
1 large green pepper
3 medium zucchini
12 cherry tomatoes
1 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 teaspoon thyme
1 teaspoon marjoram
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 small clove garlic

To make kabobs, use 12 metal skewers about 9 inches each. Cut each turkey tenderloin in half lengthwise; cut each half into 6 chunks for a total of 24 chunks. Quarter onion; separate pieces. Cut stems of mushrooms even with caps. Cut green pepper into 12 chunks. Cut each zucchini into 1 inch chunks to make a total of 18 chunks.

To build turkey-zucchini kabobs, use 4 turkey chunks and 3 zucchini chunks for each of 6 skewers. Alternate turkey and zucchini chunks, beginning and ending with turkey.

To build vegetable kabobs, use 2 mushrooms, 2 green pepper chunks, 2 onion pieces and 2 cherry tomatoes for each of 6 skewers. Arrange as follows: 1 mushroom, 1 green pepper chunk, 1 onion piece, 1 cherry tomato and 1 mushroom.

Prepare herbed butter by melting butter in small saucepan; remove from heat. Stir in parsley, thyme, marjoram, salt, pepper and lemon juice; add garlic clove. Place turkey-zucchini kabobs over hot, glowing coals; baste with herbed butter. Cook 10 minutes, turn and baste again. Add vegetable kabobs to grill and baste; cook an additional 10 minutes or until turkey and vegetables are done as desired. Makes 6 servings, 1 turkey-zucchini kabob and 1 vegetable kabob each.

Try getting away from meat

A key aim of "The Alternative Diet" is to get away from meat as a main course.

It takes some adjustment. So health experts who constructed the diet, menus and recipes at the federally supported Clinical Research Center, University of Iowa, suggesting weaning the family from a high meat intake in three stages:

—Phase 1: Avoid foods high in cholesterol and saturated fat. "Delete egg yolk, butterfat, lard, organ meat, skin of poultry and fish and visible fat on meat."

—Phase 2: Start a gradual transition from 16 ounces of meat a day to no more than 6-to-8 ounces.

—Phase 3: "Meat, fish and poultry used as condiments — not as main dishes."

In the third phase, according to the plan, meat would be used only in smaller quantities to spice up vegetable-rice-cereal-legume based dishes "much as it has been doing in Oriental, Indian and Mediterranean cookery for some time." The total of meat, fish and poultry used per person for this purpose would average only 3 to 4 ounces a day and "fish and poultry should be stressed instead of meat because of their lower saturated fat content."

Supply, quality fresh produce good

In general, supplies and quality of fresh produce are good. Many standard items are available at reasonable prices and a few, new seasonal items are trickling in.

Fruit

It is now the peak of the strawberry season in California and berries are arriving from locations across the state. Quality is outstanding and prices should remain stable.

The tomato story remains unchanged at this point. Most supplies continue out of Mexico, where fruit is tight and quality poor. Florida is opening up production, but sources say recent rain there could hamper supplies.

Avocado growers continue to report that their fruit is not sizing up. Small sizes are plentiful, but retailers want the larger fruit. Because of this situation, prices should hold stable or move up some.

The apple market is fairly steady with mainly the Red and Golden delicious and Pippins available. Both the Rome and Spartans are around, but starting to wind up.

Cantaloupe out of Mexico remain fairly high in price now, but as production picks up, prices should ease. Eating quality is good, but shelf life is short. In the next few weeks, watermelon volume should pick up as new areas open. This should result in lower prices.

A few California cherries and peaches are trickling into the market now. Peaches out of Bakersfield should have more volume in about two weeks, while cherry volume will be better around the end of

May. For tropical fruit, both bananas and pineapples are good consumer buys since both are rather plentiful. Mangos are available but are still about three weeks away from good production.

Vegetables

With about four growing areas all in production, iceberg lettuce is plentiful, making these salad days. Quality continues to improve. The soft lettuces are also abundant and reasonable in price.

Artichokes are about at their peak in quality and price now. Volume should continue for about another week, then will start to taper off some.

California sweet corn out of Coachealla should open up this week (May 7). Sources say that between local production and Florida, there should be ample supplies available.

An excellent buy this week is zucchini. Supplies out of San Diego are plentiful and quality is fairly good. Both green onions and radishes are also good buys with prices reasonable. The broccoli market is down some making it a better buy.

Not much change to report with cucumbers, bell peppers and green beans. Prices are high and supplies tight, however the situation for green beans should ease as more areas open for production.

One other item continues to be a good buy — the russet potato. The white rose potato out of Bakersfield is also starting with quality average.

Poached Eggs Pilaf is a sophisticated way to transform eggs from the usual breakfast fare into an elegant dinner entree. The eggs nestle into a bed of pilaf which is colorful with bacon, onion, green pepper and dash of paprika. Try it.

Help the budget

Make a sophisticated egg dish

Poached Eggs Pilaf is a sophisticated way to transform eggs from a familiar breakfast food into an elegant dinner entree. And without a lot of work, time or expense, either.

The eggs, poached to whatever degree of doneness you prefer, nestle in the colorful pilaf which is concocted easily from rice, bacon, onion, green pepper and chicken bouillon. A mellow cheddar cheese sauce completes the main dish that can be served in a large, handsome casserole, individual ramekins or au gratin dishes.

Main dishes such as this one that rely on eggs for the primary source of protein make good sense (cents?) in these days of run-away food costs. Eggs supply high quality protein at incredibly low prices. At 90 cents a dozen, a serving of two eggs costs only 15 cents. Eggs also provide many other essential nutrients, too: iron, phosphorus, trace minerals, the vitamins A, D, E, K and all the B complex. Not bad for 7½ cents a crack, is it?

Poached Eggs Pilaf

6 servings
6 slices bacon
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper

3 cups chicken bouillon
½ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups long grained rice
12 eggs, poached*

Cheese Sauce
In large fry pan cook bacon over medium heat until crisp. Drain, reserving 2 tablespoons drippings.

In large saucepan cook onion and green pepper in bacon drippings until tender but not brown, 3 to 5 minutes. Add bouillon and pepper and bring to boil. Add rice. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until rice is done, 20 to 25 minutes. Crumble bacon and stir into rice.

Arrange rice mixture in 2-quart shallow casserole or six individual au gratin dishes. Arrange poached eggs over rice. Pour Cheese Sauce over rice. Serve immediately.

Cheese Sauce:
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ cup (2 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon

Worcestershire sauce
In saucepan cook butter over medium heat until melted. Stir in flour and cook until bubbly. Add milk all at once and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Boil, stirring constantly, 1 minute. Remove from heat. Add cheese, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Stir until cheese melts.

*To poach eggs, lightly oil a saucepan. Add enough water to fill 2 inches deep. Heat to boiling over medium-high heat. Reduce heat to keep water at a simmer. Break eggs, one at a time, into dish, then slip each egg into water, holding dish close to water's surface. Simmer 3 to 5 minutes depending on desired doneness. When done, lift eggs with slotted pancake turner or spoon onto absorbent paper. Drain and trim edges, if desired. To poach eggs ahead, slightly undercook, then store floating in cold water in covered container in refrigerator. Reheat in simmering water for a minute.

Seafood lovers changing pace

Seafood lovers who are fishing for a change of pace in meal planning will want to try seafood with an Oriental flavor. Developed by home economists, Shrimp and Crab with Water Chestnuts is a festive seafood dish.

Serve crisp heat-and-serve egg rolls and Chinese pea pods — both available in supermarkets

Shrimp and Crab with Water Chestnuts
(4 Servings)

1 package (6 oz.) frozen crabmeat, thawed and drained

1 can (8 oz.) water chestnuts, drained, quartered
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
2 tablespoons chopped green onions
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 cups peeled and deveined small shrimp
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons water
2 cups cooking oil
4 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons dry sherry
½ cup chicken broth
Salt and white pepper to taste
½ teaspoon sugar

2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
2 green onions, cut into 1-inch lengths.

Combine crab meat, water chestnuts, 1 tablespoon minced ginger and chopped green onions. Add 2 teaspoons cornstarch to shrimp and mix well. Blend remaining 1 tablespoon cornstarch with water.

Heat oil in wok or large skillet. When hot, add shrimp and cook, stirring, about 30 seconds. Drain shrimp. Pour off all but 3 tablespoons oil, reserving remainder for another use.

Add garlic to pan and brown; remove and discard. Add crab mixture and cook, stirring, about 30 seconds. Add wine; cook 30 seconds more. Add chicken broth, salt, pepper, sugar and soy sauce. Cook 1 minute. Add cornstarch-water mixture, cooking and stirring until thickened. Add shrimp, cooking about 30 seconds or until shrimp are heated through. Serve immediately, topped with remaining ginger and green onions.
